The progress

- Journeys continue to increase
- > 400 App accounts created
- Some consistent passengers – completing 10+ bookings in the first few months
- Education movement included
- 32% of payments made via the App; 42% made on the bus; 26% ENCTS

So has it worked?

- Yes – it provides a service to people who otherwise wouldn't have one
- But.....
 - 50% of the loaded miles are for only 1 passenger; 23% with 2 passengers
 - Cost per passenger journey is currently about £12

Food for thought.....

- Cost per passenger journey is high – is the area too big or the model wrong?
- Demand responsive is great for the passenger, but is it great for budgets? Would it be more viable to have an infrequent scheduled service or would no-one use it?
- Has the App helped build passengers? Would they have used the service anyway? Do we need such a fancy tool and would just a good scheduling tool suffice?
- Does the hub and spoke model work for passengers?
